Attention Mr

1) In paragraph 19 of Chapter II of their Report, the Prison Reforms Committee recommend that till such time as the special institutions required for juveniles and adolescents are duly established and come into working, all offenders under the age of 18 years now under confinement in both the jails may be removed to some place where suitable temporary accommodation may be made available and that first offenders between 18 and 21 may for the present be retained in these jails, but in a distinct block properly divided and separated off from the regular convict barracks.

2) The Inspector-General of Prisons states in respect of this recommendation that the provision of temporary accommodation for juvenile, and adolscent offenders and the employment of the necessary staff for the treatment and training to be given for such prisoners involves heavy additional cost, that under the existing arrangement juveniles of 16 years of age and below are confined in a separate section of the Central Jail and adolescents aged between 16 and 21 are confined in a separate barrack of the same jail. He suggests that this arrangement may continue till such time as the special institutions required for these prisoners are established on a permanent basis.

3) In view of the heavy cost which the acceptance of the recommendation of the Committee involves and the

Extract from the recommendation of the Prison Reforms Committee and the views of the Inspector-General of Prisons thereon.

Recommendation No. 8.

Till such time as the special institutions required for juvenile and adolescent offenders are duly established, all prisoners under the age of 18 years may be removed to some place where suitable temporary accommodation may be made available.

Views of the Inspector-General of Prisons thereon:-

The provision of temporary accommodation for juvenile and adolescent offenders and the employment of the necessary staff for the treatment and training to be given to such prisoners involves heavy additional cost./ Under the existing arrangements juveniles of 16 years of age and below are confined in a separate section of the Central Jail and adolescents aged between 16 and 21 are confined in a separate barracks of the same jail. This arrangement may continue till such time as the special institutions required for these prisoners are established on a permanent basis.
